

Runic Title Language Guide — Elidoras Codex

This guide explains how to set up a custom Title font style that looks like a coded, runic language while still being legible as letters through pareidolia (the brain's tendency to see familiar patterns in abstract forms).

Concept

- The Title language should appear ancient, alien, and coded.
 - Shapes are angular, geometric, and rune-like, but hint at Latin letters when viewed closely.
 - The style communicates “hidden meaning” while remaining usable for headers.

How to Create It in Canva

1. Base Font: Use Orbitron Bold or another techno-geometric font as a foundation.
 2. Effects: Apply Canva's Glow or Shadow to thicken strokes and create glyph-like halos.
 3. Letter Adjustments: Increase spacing (tracking) and sometimes overlap letters slightly to make them appear like coded glyphs.
 4. Overlay Glyphs: Add simple line icons, resonance glyphs, or fractal motifs around letters to push the rune aesthetic.
 5. Save as Style: Once designed, save this text style as “Title One — Runic.”

Advanced Custom Font Path

If you want more permanence:

1. Design glyphs in a vector editor (Illustrator, Inkscape, or Figma).
 2. Map them onto a Latin alphabet using a font creation tool (FontForge, Glyphs, Calligraphr).
 3. Export as OTF/TTF and upload to Canva (Brand Kit → Upload Font).
 4. This creates your own coded runic typeface while remaining keyboard-typeable.

Styling Rules

- Size: 72–120 pt for posters, 48–72 pt for slides.
 - Colors: Cyber Gold (#F5C542) primary, Nexus Purple (#6E3AFF) and Digital Teal (#14D4C5) as alternates.
 - Effects: Light outer glow (Teal/Purple), blur <20%, transparency 30–40%.
 - Placement: Only for major headers, cosmic posters, or lore titles. Avoid for body text.

Example Uses

- Hero Poster Title: Runic Title One in Cyber Gold with Teal glow.
 - Lore Page Heading: Orbitron base font with rune overlays.
 - Symbolic UI: Sections labeled in Title One font, paired with glyph icons.
